

Kenyon International Deploys Two Search and Recovery Teams to Port-au-Prince, Haiti

(January 16, 2010, Houston, Texas) Kenyon International Emergency Services, the world's leading disaster management company, has completed its assessment and has deployed two teams to Haiti to begin recovery efforts for a non-government client.

"The teams are now in route to Port-au-Prince," said Frank Ciaccio, vice president of commercial services with Kenyon International Emergency Services. "We are executing our plan that will be fully operational within the next 24 to 48 hours. There are two teams going to respond. The first will be a recovery advice team that will be in Port-au-Prince and second team will be based in the Dominican Republic."

Ciaccio says the teams will be facing several challenges during this deployment. "It's still a dangerous situation. It ranges from removing the human remains from buildings, getting the remains to the morgue area in the Dominican Republic, processing them and getting the remains repatriated back to their families. We also need to collect medical records and missing person's information as well."
