KENYON WORKS WITH ERA TO SET EMERGENCY RESPONSE PREPAREDNESS STANDARDS

October 15, 2007, London, UK—Kenyon International Emergency Services has been working with the European Regions Airline Association (ERA) to publish the first Emergency Response Preparedness Standards for its member airlines and has jointly briefed the European Director for Transport on those standards.

ERA's standards consist of eight categories of preparedness: management, human support and assistance, crisis communications, business continuity, alliances and code-shares, insurance, airports and ground handling agents.

According to Robert Jensen, Kenyon CEO and president, "The standards are a modern reflection of the planning and training necessary in order to meet the complications of an international aircraft accident and the demands of the victims, their families, staff members and other stakeholders."
